HONORS FOR GENERAL STRYKER. To the Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: To the lay reader it seems a curious circumstance that the New-Jersey Historical Society in its forty-two years of existence has never elected but two men to its presidency who were them-selves known as historians. The late Hon. John Clement, of Haddonfield, near Camden, was a con stant contributor to the press on topics connected with the history of West Jersey, and wrote a book, "First Settlers of Newton," Camden County which is a model of local history and genealogy At the meeting of the society on Tuesday last when the venerable Dr. Samuel H. Pennington, of Newark, laid down the presidency, not because his ninety-two years are at all burdensome but because he was disabled by a serious accident two years since the society chose as his successor General William S. Siryker, of Trenton, the Adjutant-General of New-Jersey, and thereby honored itself not less than him. General Stryker has, through years of effort, secured for New-Jersey the completest record possessed by any State of its early military rosters—of the Colonial wars, the Revolutionary War and the War of 1812. Moreover, he has published a series of monographs on the Revolutionary history of the State of the greatest interest and value, and having a charming literary style which makes them most readable. He is the recognized authority on the military anals of the State, and is honored both at home and abroad as a historian of the highest rank. His forthcoming history of the battle of Trenton is certain to add to his fame. It is eminently fitting that such a man should be president of the State Historical Society.

What's wrong with ex-Semator Winton, of Hackensack? His sober senses must be gradually drifting away from him. In a recent editorial, published in his newspaper, "The Bergen County Democrat," he says: "If Mr. Cleveland is not the next Governor of New-Jersey, it will be because the Democratic party is short of votes."

There would, undoubtedly, be a shortage of votes great enough to prevent Mr. Cleveland from becoming Governor of New-Jersey if he should ever be ambitious to reach that position, but it wouldn't look well, to say the least, for a man to descend from the chief executive office of the United States to the Gubernatorial chair of this State, and we are inclined to think that Mr. Cleveland would take that view of it.

If Mr. Cleveland comes to Princeton to live, he will, in all probability, be importuned by certain Democrats to take the leadership of that party, and give his counsel in times when counsel is needed, and he may consent to do that, but he will not be likely to fool away his time in seeking election as Governor of the State.

If it should happen, however, that Mr. Cleveland was desirous of finding out the length and breadth of his popularity here, and he should seek the Governorship, the result would undoubtedly be very disappointing to him, and he will hardly take the risk of having his feelings harrowed up by defeat.

In the Presidential election of 1884, New-Jersey gave Cleveland 127,784 votes, against Blaine's 122,433. In 1882 Cleveland's vote was If1,696, against Harrison's 14,244. In 1892 Cleveland's vote was If1,696, against Harrison's 14,244. In 1892 Cleveland's vote was If1,696, against Harrison's 14,244, in 1892 cleveland's vote was If1,696, against Harrison's 185,161.

It would seem from these figures that Mr. Cleveland's popularity with the people of New-Jersey was gaining strength between campaigns, but it should be remembered that he was before the people of the country in Issue he was elected.

Since the election of 1892 the voters of New-Jer

FOR THE WIVES OF VETERANS.

From The Jersey City Journal.

There is a bill before the Legislature which provides for the spending of $20,000 on a Home for veterans and their wive. That is a thing which everyhody should be glad to see done. The same bill provides for this money being used to purchase a farm at Vineland as the site of the Home. That is not so commendable.

The same amount of money will produce better results if it is used to increase the utility of the Soldiers' Home which the State already owns in Kearny Township. The site is sufficiently large for the purpose. It consists of nearly eighteen acres, and has six or seven fine buildings already erected. The Home fronts on the Passaic River erected. The Home fronts on the Passaic River erected, and has been running for thirty years. Its management is so organized that it could take in this proposed Home and save a considerable annual expense to the State. The $30,000 would go further in erecting a more suitable building, befurther in erecting a more suitable building, befurther is one thing wanting in the State's proyetty. There is one thing wanting in the State's provisions for oid soldiers which this bill meets, no matter whether the Vincland or Kearny site is chosen, and that is in the care of the wives of veterans. As it is now, the life companion of the soldier who fought in the war, the woman who shared all its horrors in anxious waiting, who has been his partner in thirty years of life's struggles been his partner in thirty years of life's struggles been his partner in thirty years of life struggles been hy poorhouse for a refuge if her husband, through age or infirmity, must take of the charity of the State. Both become charges upon the community. But why should they be separated? It is as needless as it is heartless. This is a good bill, because it does away with this crucity. It provides a home where the soldier and his wife can go together. It is too had that New-Jersey should have to follow nearly every State in the Union in such and of the charty of the soldier an

Since the election of 1892 the voters of New-Jersey have shown more than once that they are in a hurry to free themselves from the bondage of idleners into which they unwittingly rushed at the call of Mr. Cleveland, and should that gentleman in the near future undertake to test his political strength in this State, he would find 69 per cent of those who voted for him and his policy four years ago setting their hands against him on the ground that he stands as the advocate of a theory which has operated against all the industries of New-Jersey.

It may be that Mr. Cleveland would do effective work here as a harmonizer of the Democratic forces, but even that is improbable, because of the strong faction in the State which is opposed to his scund-money ideas.

We do not think that Mr. Winton will ever realize his evident hope that Mr. Cleveland will some day all the chair of the Governor of New-Jersey.
